January 2007

Newsletter of the Rosemary Garfoot Public Library

FROM THE DIRECTOR

What a difference a year makes. Last January the dormant landscape was alive with the hum of construction vehicles, the scent of fresh lumber and the promise of a new community public library. This January the landscape is graced with a lovely building and the hustle and bustle of library patrons as they browse collections, check out books and read, play or study in their vibrant new library.

Another year in the life of our community has been relegated to distant memories or documented forever in historical annals. As the New Year winds up, I am reminded of an excerpt from a poem by Alfred Lord Tennyson who wrote: "For the old year lies a-dying/ Old year you must not die/ You came to us so readily/ You lived with us so steadily/ Old year you shall not die." Most assuredly the past year "shall" never die. We will, on occasion, be reminded of its significance when we enter our new library or as our gaze happens upon the cornerstone heralding 2006 as the year a village built a library.

Happy New Year from the Library Board and staff of the Rosemary Garfoot Public Library.

TEEN SPACE

---

In observance of National Children's Book Week, (Nov. 13-18), we started a paperback swap. Do you have paperbacks that you have already read and are in need of a new home? Do you need more space on your bookshelves (or on your desk or under your bed) at home? Are you looking for some new ideas of what to read next? Bring in your finished books and put them on the paperback spinner near the booth in the Teen Space, and see what you can find to bring home with you! Currently the rack is holding books we have deleted from our collection, and donations. Once the rack gets some more use there will be an ever-changing selection.

SPECIAL GUEST REVIEW

By Grace Vosen

Adventure, intrigue, friendship, betrayal, and more are in Warriors: Into the Wild, the first book written by author Erin Hunter (who is really the two UK authors Kate Cary and Cherith Baldry.) Cat lovers and non-cat lovers alike will enjoy this book – or series, as there are now eleven more Warriors books, all very exciting to read.

The four Clans of wild cats were at peace . . . but they're not anymore. Noble ThunderClan is growing weaker, and they need more warriors right away. Where can they find someone who will save them?

Meanwhile, a house cat named rusty ventures into the forest, and is fascinated by the ways of the Clans. Could he be ThunderClan's hero? And is he the one whose coming the ancient warrior ancestors have foretold? Bluestar, leader of ThunderClan, thinks this is possible, so she takes Rusty in and gives him a Clan name: Firepaw.

But another enemy is rising – one that only Firepaw and his new best friends know about. How can they tell Bluestar about it when the enemy is one of her fighters? Will she believe them? And do they even believe themselves? Read the book to find out!

Tweens (ages 9-12), have you read a book that you love and would like to tell others about? How would you like to have your writing published in the paper? Talk to Catherine Baer, 798-3881, about submitting a book review and be our next featured special guest reviewer.
